

Cross Border Remittances (under Current Account)

Current Account transaction

- i. Outward remittances
- ii. Inward remittance

Current Account Transaction: A current account transaction refers to any transaction other than a capital account transaction. It includes all transactions that do not result in any change in the assets or liabilities of a resident outside India or the assets or liabilities of a non-resident in India, and are therefore treated as current account transactions.

Outward Remittances: Outward remittances refer to the transfer of funds from a resident Indian to a beneficiary located outside India for genuine and permissible purposes, in accordance with the provisions of the Foreign Exchange Management Act (FEMA), 1999, and its subsequent amendments.
